

The SAG Hollywood Conservatory offers an opportunity for SAG members to hone and develop their craft through classes, workshops, lectures and symposia in a supportive and nurturing environment. Participation in the Conservatory is limited to SAG members in good standing. A small administrative fee is required for membership.

Workshops are offered from September through May and include on-camera commercial and theatrical techniques, commercial and theatrical cold-reading techniques, voice-overs, improvisation and "Meet the Casting Director" seminars.

The Hollywood Conservatory is held on the campus of the American Film Institute (AFI). SAG's agreement with the AFI requires the Institute's first-year student films to cast exclusively from the rosters of the SAG Conservatory membership. This provides opportunities for SAG members to gain vital on-camera experience, as well as opportunities to work with young directors, producers and writers as they develop their craft.
