Actor Bio:

Aaron Wilton graduated with Honors from Hamilton College with a Bachelor of Arts in Theatre. Before leaving, he received the Karen Williams Theatre Prize and a certificate of recognition for "Outstanding Contribution to Hamilton College." He moved to NYC after graduation and co-created/performed the show Happy Mundanes, which was produced by the NYC International Fringe Festival in 2004. While acting in a touring company out of George Street Playhouse, he was nominated for a Perry Award for Montclair Operetta Club's Footloose (Best Featured Actor). Three years out of school, he landed a contract with Hudson Stage Company that got him his Equity card. In 2009, he won a Shellie Award for "Best Supporting Actor in a Play" as Stanley in The Willows Theatre's Brighton Beach Memoirs, which was also nominated for "Outstanding Production." He most recently provided a leading character voice for the "Godfather 2" video game (featuring Robert Duvall). He feels very lucky to have worked with and learned from some astronomically talented actors, directors and writers. He currently resides in the San Francisco Bay Area and makes his living as a professional actor of stage, screen and voice-over, working with his agents at JE Talent.
