Actor Bio:

10.25.08

Vibrant, bubbly and smart are just a few words to describe teen actress Chelsea Makela who can next be seen as a co-lead in the spoof movie, Dance Flick for Paramount Pictures (February 6, 2009). The comedy is about a rich suburban white girl and her friends who get tangled up in misadventures. In the film, Chelsea plays "Tracy" one of the friends in the bunch, who is perky and upbeat, but doesn't have very much street smarts and tends to land herself in a quandary of mishaps. The film is directed by Damien Wayans and Keenen Ivory Wayans.

Barely in Los Angeles a year, this project is Chelsea's very first paying job as an actress Not Bad!

Born in Northern California in a small agricultural town called Brentwood, Chelsea knew in the 5th grade that she wanted to act when she landed a part in the school play. Her parents were so supportive that her mother would drive her into San Francisco every weekend for acting classes. Also in high school, Chelsea joined a touring choir that performed around the nation and one of her highlighted moments in life, was their performance in New York's famed Carnegie Hall. There was no doubt that Chelsea had the acting bug and that her next journey would be Los Angeles to live out her dream!

Chelsea tackles her budding acting career with professionalism far beyond her years. Industry professionals describe her as an exceptional energy to have around with a great sense of humor and ability to improv on the spot. Her ability to go from comedy to drama with her acting has quickly jump started her new career in Hollywood.

When she is not working Chelsea loves coaching her swim team, playing piano, writing and participating in charitable companies that aid the community. She is also very conscious about the environment and being as Green as she can be.

Chelsea currently resides in Los Angeles.
